

Greg Schott grew up in Charlotte, and graduated from NC State with a BS in Mechanical Engineering (1986). He started his career in manufacturing and design engineering with Westinghouse. He then received an MBA from Stanford (1991). After business school, he worked for The Boston Consulting Group in Boston and then returned to the San Francisco Bay Area where he has spent over 20 years building and leading technology companies from early-stage through IPO. Greg served as Vice President of Marketing and Vice President of Operations at DG Systems and then served as Senior Vice President of Marketing and Corporate Development at Agile Software. He then became Senior Vice President of Marketing at SpringSource. Greg became MuleSoft's CEO in 2009, growing MuleSoft from $2M in revenue to over $800M and from 20 people to over 1,700. Greg led MuleSoft's IPO in 2017 and subsequent $6.5B acquisition by Salesforce in 2018. Greg and his wife are active philanthropically to address health and education challenges in developing countries.